He has been forced to make tough political decisions about the city's troubled pension system, its budget, and its business community. Along the way he has steered away from some aspects of the Tea Party. His office has denounced the anti-abortion "personhood" amendment to state law, and he has pushed for Obamacare to be implemented in the city. Now Landrieu faces a setback in the form of an inspector general's report released on Wednesday about his February 2013 airplane trip from New Orleans to Washington, DC. The inspector general concluded that Landrieu, his entourage, and Secret Service agents violated federal travel policies when they flew commercially to Washington and back, thereby incurring additional costs to the city. Louisiana's congressional delegation all had full-fare corporate business class seats on the trip. Landrieu had a Delta seat and the Secret Service had Delta and Southwest flights, according to the report, which noted that Landrieu had a $10,000 security-related charge on a Delta flight. Landrieu's office said in a statement that the report found no issues with the way Landrieu flew to Washington, and that the mayor had clearances for the trip from the Federal Aviation Administration and the Department of Homeland Security. "The Inspector General has offered no additional grounds for the reimbursement claim," Landrieu's office said. "The final report did not find any additional problems." Landrieu's office said that the cost of the flight was charged to the Federal Aviation Administration. The report says that the city disputed the $60,238 charge for the trip, but the FAA ultimately reimbursed the city for the cost, including a $25,000 discount. The FAA reimbursed the city $17,258 for the cost of one of the secret ba244e880a
