Create a partition on the selected hard drive or partition. If the partition was created on an existing partition, you are prompted to confirm the operation. If the partition was created on an available drive, you are prompted for the drive letter, the new size, and the new file system. The new file system type is either NTFS or FAT32. Choose File System. Choose NTFS. Prepare the partition to be copied with the required file system type, the new size, and the new drive letter. If the partition was created on an available drive, choose More options. If the partition was created on an existing partition, choose the other partition to be used. Choose Save. The operation is not reversible. Use the following procedure to delete the partition on the selected hard drive or partition. If the partition was created on an existing partition, choose Other. If the partition was created on an available drive, you are prompted for the drive letter, the partition name, and the new size. Choose Delete partition. Choose Continue. You are prompted for the desired new size. The new size is the original size of the partition, plus the size of the new partition. The desired size is a value between 5 GB and the size of the selected hard drive or partition. Enter the desired new size. You are prompted to overwrite the existing file system. Choose Yes to overwrite. You are prompted to overwrite the new partition or to keep the data on the partition. Choose Yes to overwrite. Delete the partition on the selected hard
