Training for Harvest: Stopping for the One, Believing for the Multitudes (A Storybook Teaching Guide) There are seven planned readers of this story in the Park District of Bloomington, and the District will print a small number of copies for each group. We hope to do the same at schools, and the Park District and schools will distribute copies to the public. Epic stories offer us a fresh perspective of the Bible, and this is one of the most powerful ways the Bible is a story, often used as a teaching tool. As you read this story, you will experience how each part of the story can be used to teach doctrine. Through reflection, discussion, and memorization, you will learn and see just how much the Bible contains to teach to us and how important it is to learn how to apply its truths to our lives.

The Story of Seven In a time when a woman must carry her child for nine months and then bear the physical, emotional, and financial burden of labor and pregnancy for nine more months, a precious idea was born. This idea, though simple, brought such incredible joy to God's people, and it was named God's love for us. Today, we love God and we love our children and our family and friends with all of our heart, soul, mind, and strength. We also have a special love for the people that live on the earth, and this book is about that love. In the book of Genesis, we read of seven people who were created in the image of God and who were good to God. They lived in a world that was not evil, but they were not perfect. They became evil, though. Each one of the seven was given special attention, because God's plan was for them to be special people. The story of the seven in Genesis, though, does not end at the fall. As you read Genesis 6, you will see that God was sad about what happened, but God had a plan. God's plan was to send His Son into the world to defeat sin and to save people. God's plan was that Jesus would die on the cross, giving Himself as the ultimate sacrifice for the sins of people. Jesus' death was the ultimate sacrifice that God wanted to make. If He had to die, He wanted to make sure that no one else would have
