Scenarios consist of scripted steps you can trigger at specific times, dates and even with the use of external programs. The recorded steps are then created as HTML web pages that can be shared with other team members. AutomateIt is a powerful tool for testing applications remotely. For example, AutomateIt allows you to automate the application's shutdown, open and minimize operations to ensure that applications will quit as expected. AutomateIt supports all web browsers with the ability to drive Mozilla, Firefox, Opera, Safari and Internet Explorer. As mentioned, the tool allows you to schedule tests to be run as scheduled tasks. It is possible to create a scenario that is set to run when any of the users logs on. Moreover, AutomateIt supports logging tasks into the log file for each test run. Logs can be uploaded to a central location or distributed locally over HTTP. AutomateIt records all the actions performed into a log file and a screenshot of the active window. It's also possible to send test results to the team's email address. You can also export test results into images or into HTML pages that can be shared on
