I didn't know what to expect from the school but I knew I wanted to be on the 100 yard and 200 yard and the 400 and 200 relays. I didn't know if they could run a relay, so I didn't expect that. I walked into the stadium and they had us in the dark and we watched the meet. I knew that I wanted to go into the stadium and see the field and it was good. We got there and it was cool and there were fans and people coming out. It was pretty cool. There was really nothing to tell me what to expect from the school. I'm not really into the kids at the school that much. I don't know how they got to know who we were, but they knew who we were. It was an honor to be there because I was only there for a few minutes, and I know that they are really big about it. With all the good things that I hear about the school, the only thing I would say is that it is too competitive. I know that for track and field it can be like that, but that

Dynamics and energetics of the Escherichia coli  $\Delta(gdh) \Delta(gabD)$  mutant on GOS producing bacteria. Glycosyl-glycerol-lipid A (GGLA), a special characteristic component in the outer membrane of Gram-negative bacteria, is well known as a precursor of several biologically active molecules. In the present study, the Escherichia coli  $\Delta(gdh) \Delta(gabD)$  mutant that can not produce GGLA from glucose and produce rhamnolipids as a by-product was applied to the cultivation of some GOS producing bacteria. The mutant was grown in a synthetic medium containing glucose or glycerol with or without GOS, then the dynamics and energetics of the mutant were analyzed. With all kinds of sugar components, the production of rhamnolipids from  $\Delta(gdh) \Delta(gabD)$  mutant was high and reached close to 100% of total rhamnolipids. The optical density of mutant cultures grown in the
