The exact race of the Lizardman is unknown and is not confirmed in the D&D universe, but has been speculated and is commonly believed to be a reptilian humanoid. The Lizardman exists in the same place as the Small and Large Dragon Races, and shares similar features with many other dragonborn races. Size and Capabilities The race has a base size of Medium and has a challenge rating of 3. In addition, the race receives +2 size bonus to Strength and Dexterity, and has 5 feet of natural armor. The race has a base speed of 40 feet, and has the ability to climb vertical surfaces with a DC 20 Climb check. It has a swim speed of 30 feet if it is wading in water or 60 feet if it is swimming. It also has a base number of 3 hit points. Languages The Lizardman is one of the only races that has a language other than Common. It speaks Draconic in addition to its native Common. Variants and Subraces The Lizardman is a member of the Dragonborn, Dragon, and Human subraces. The Lizardman is considered a subrace of the Dragonborn race for purposes of races like Half-Dragon, which are rules that affect only Dragonborn. There are also several lizard-human variants that share their base features with the base lizardman race, but have features and abilities that are unique to their subraces. The character can select an alternate racial trait for the Lizardman to have as an optional rule. Lizardfolk The Lizardfolk are a subrace of Lizardmen. They share a racial trait which gives
