Bieber's Calabasas mansion, police uncovered a lab where chemicals that could potentially be used to make explosives were found, sources told Page Six. The sources said that cocaine and ketamine, a stimulant that's abused as a party drug, were among the chemicals found in the West Los Angeles home. We're told police also found some red mercury in the house. No drugs were found on the singer's property, and no one has been arrested. But law enforcement sources confirmed that someone found in the suspected lab was being questioned. Multiple sources said Justin (whose real name is Justin Chance-Bieber) believed in the Illuminati and that police were investigating him in connection to an organization that is believed to have ties 3e33713323
