Dorothy Hamill, the actress and vocal activist for women's rights, says she can't imagine Trump as first female president After a female presidential candidate shook up the 2016 race, would celebrity media mouthpieces be celebrating a female president in 2017? Not according to Dorothy Hamill, one of the prominent actresses and vocal advocates for women's rights, who said it's impossible to imagine Trump as first female president. At a panel in Manhattan on Friday, Hamill, 73, who starred in a number of films and TV shows, including the short-lived “Charlie’s Angels” and “Fantasy Island,” told the crowd at the Aspen Ideas Festival that she feels “she’s not going to learn anything from” Trump. Get push notifications with news, features and more. When asked what she could glean from her years of activism, Hamill said she had learned the importance of having good friends, and she then questioned whether Trump would make such a friend. “Trump has a bully way about her, and if somebody hurts me I’m gonna take care of it, and I don’t appreciate people who say they’re going to hurt me and I might have to take care of it,” she said. Hamill then asked the audience if they thought Trump could be president. “I’m going to say ‘no,’ ” said Hamill, who added that her husband doesn't like her saying it, but that she feels Trump "has absolutely no interest in anything that isn't an ego thing." Hamill went on to clarify that she doesn't "advocate violence" against Trump, and that she's merely stating her opinion that she doesn't believe the woman will be able to work across the aisle in Congress and bring people together. "I can't imagine a meeting with Trump in which she would say, 'Oh, Dorothy, I'd like to work with you," she said, and that if Trump were to serve as president, "I don't think we'd be seeing any of those bridges that she was talking about." Image zoom Hamill also said that she wouldn't advise her daughters,

Q: Problems setting up TensorFlow with GPU on Windows 10 From what I've been able to find, the only way to use TensorFlow on GPU on Windows is through a docker container. I followed the guide from here and I got a container up and running. But I cannot seem to find any performance increase over a non-GPU machine. The GPU is attached to a GTX 1070.

A: The short answer is that I am not seeing a performance increase because I am not using the GPU. According to the guide I linked to, To use the GPU in Windows, you can create a Python 2.7 container and install the TensorFlow Eager interpreter with the `gpu-eager` flag. So it seems there is no way to use TensorFlow with GPU on Windows without using a docker container.

Q: How to make TextBlock display multiple lines but only when it is "full"? I am currently writing a C# WPF application. I have a TextBlock that is placed in a GroupBox. The user enters several words in the TextBlock, and presses a "send" button to send the entered words to a server. The challenge I have is that I wish the user to be able to enter several words in the TextBox and have them all displayed. The problem is that the user can also enter a lot of useless characters in the TextBlock, and fill it with junk. The TextBlock's width is limited to the width of the GroupBox. I am therefore looking for a way to format the TextBlock so that the TextBlock displays the entered text (several lines but only when the text is "full"). Are there any ways to accomplish this, without having to resort to Javascript? A: Use a multiline TextBox. Add the following to your XAML:

System Requirements:
