A random number generator with period of four years (Two hundred and fifty two weeks). It generates numbers from 0 (Which represents the start of the year) to 99999 (Which represents the end of the year) So, One iteration of this number generator is from 0 to 99999. You can use this number generator to generate a random set of numbers (The set will have less than or equal to a defined number of elements, for example 10) It is also possible to define a range of numbers, for example int x = 12761; int y = 16271; Random rand = new Random(); Console.WriteLine(rand.Next(x, y)); Console.ReadKey(); This will generate a random number between the specified values. ' You can also generate a random list of words from a given string, for example Random rand = new Random(); string[] words = {"Hello", "World"}; Console.WriteLine(rand.Next(0, words.Length)); Console.WriteLine(rand.Next(0, words.Length)); Console.ReadKey(); This will generate two random numbers between 0 and the length of the words array. This random number generator will have a period of four years. For example, in the future, when we start using a new year, you will be able to use the same random number generator, and it will generate a random number between 0 and 99999. In addition, for each new version of this language, we will be able to fix mistakes in the random number generator.
