This game is based on Action, Adventure,.SINGAPORE: A first-of-its-kind research programme aims to improve the health of the planet by studying insects and understand how they live in an increasingly built-up environment. The study will focus on the effects of urbanisation on the cities of the world's smallest, least-documented and most diverse animal kingdom. “The opportunity presented by the insects to us is unlike any other opportunity to study nature in a manner that will allow us to identify new threats to the environment,” said Richard Waite, associate professor of zoology at Singapore’s National University of Singapore (NUS). The Centre for Urban Biodiversity, which began this month, is the first such facility in Singapore, and one of only two worldwide. The programme will be led by NUS professor Waite. On top of his research, he will be responsible for managing the centre, carrying out the other researcher's experiments and putting together the findings. CUB is unique not only because of the talent involved, but
