Windows Task Scheduler allows you to create tasks that run based on the time of day, date, or a recurring schedule. You can make the tasks repeat at specified times or intervals, and you can automate the creation and deletion of tasks. Tasks are specified in XML, which makes them very easy to create and understand. In this article, we will show you how to use

Windows Task Scheduler to automate repetitive tasks. 1.How to use Windows Task Scheduler to automate repetitive tasks Step 1:Open the Task Scheduler application. Windows Task Scheduler can be accessed by opening the Start menu, selecting Control Panel, and then clicking on Administrative Tools. Step 2:In the Administrative Tools window, click on Task Scheduler. Step 3:If the Task Scheduler window is not already displayed, select the View tab, and then select the All tasks option under Task List. The Task Scheduler window should now show all tasks available to the computer. Step 4:If you want to find a specific task, select it from the Task List window, and then click on the Details button. The Task List window should display the details of that task, including the name, the date and time when it will run, and how often it will run. You can also delete a task by selecting it and then clicking on the Delete button. Step 5:To automate a task, you need to create a new task. To create a new task, click on the New task button. Step 6:Select the type of task you want to create. In this example, we will create a daily task, so we select Daily task in the Task list window. Step 7:You will need to fill in the details of your task. The Available fields are different depending on the type of task you want to create, but they can be used to create a task that will run a specific time or repeat at a specific time or interval. Step 8:For our task, we need to select the Date and Time fields and enter the date and time when the task will run. This can be done by clicking on the calendar icon to specify the date and time when the task will run. You can enter the date and time in either the US or UK formats. If you need to enter more than one date and time, you can use the Add dates and/or Add times button. Step 9:For our task computer is equipped with) from the designated drop-down list, set the input channel and adjust the recording volume. The output can be saved in multiple formats, namely MP3, OGG, WMA and WAV. For MP3 recordings, you can select a constant or a variable encoder bitrate and customize its value. Depending on the output type, Free2X Sound Recorder can generate low, medium or high quality sounds, with different sample rates and mono or stereo channels. To make things even more easy, the application features customizable shortcut keys for stopping, pausing and resuming the recording operation while working with other programs, although you can do this using the dedicated buttons within the main GUI. One of its most important features is the scheduling capability. Using this function, you can instruct Free2X Sound Recorder to start the operation at a user-defined date and time and stop the process after a specific time interval. Thus, you can leave it working in the system tray and forget about it, the recording starts automatically. Output files are displayed in the built-in file manager, allowing you to delete them, open them with an installed audio player or make use of the integrated player to listen to recordings. Combining ease of use with functionality and efficiency, Free2X Sound Recorder provides various recording configuration options, while keeping things as simple as possible for inexperienced users.
