iStat wireless Vista Gadget 1.0.05 iStat wireless Vista Gadget is a simple gadget for your desktop that reveals the current signal strength of your wireless connection. It is very simple to install and configure, as it comes packed with limited options. The interface is made from a very small frame that you can move to any position on the screen, with the help of the mouse cursor. If you pair this option with a default Windows

setting that enables the frame to stay on top of other windows, iStat wireless Vista Gadget becomes unintrusive, and you can quickly get a glimpse of it while working in other software utilities. The signal strength is expressed in percentage and a meter. Plus, you can view your IP address and network name. As far as customization options go, it is possible to change the skin color to one of the presets - Fire, Blue, Green, Orange, or Pink. However, iStat wireless Vista Gadget does not comprise any other configuration parameters. Another built-in Windows setting allows you to adjust the frame opacity. The gadget is very low-demanding when it comes to CPU and RAM. It has a good response time and refresh rate, and displays accurate information. No error dialogs have been shown in our tests, and the tool did not hang or crash. All in all, iStat wireless Vista Gadget is a stylish solution to keeping track of your WiFi signal level. Comments and ratings for iStat wireless Vista Gadget

GadgetQ: AVD boots fine but not in actual device I have this weird problem that I'm having with eclipse and android, my AVD runs fine but when I compile the code and run it it just says "Unfortunately, the App has stopped." I've tried reinstalling it, I made sure the AVD name was right. Every time I run it says the same thing. Also there are no errors in the Java Console or the errors tab or anywhere else. A: Whenever I encounter this problem, in addition to what was already said, I do the following: Reboot the computer Reboot the phone Restart Eclipse Sometimes I also try: Restarting the AVD Restarting the phone The problem with the "red light" notification sounds can be due to my power management device always in "standby" mode (it didn't work without the device) so if this is the case try doing this: Check the current power status (it might have something to do with it) Turn on standby mode (if possible) Like I said before I had this problem before and now it has disappeared. It seems that some combination of these things fixes it.
