Donner, Leena Peltonen, Alan Silman and Laura Chiang) and advisors (Drs. James Rice, Christine Chen and Elizabeth Moeschberger) to accomplish the following goals:

- 1) to gain additional expertise in the design, analysis and interpretation of longitudinal cohort studies;
- 2) to develop expertise in the use of imaging biomarkers to address population health disparities;
- and 3) to gain skills in the writing and presentation of scientific publications.

To achieve these goals, Dr. Tonti will receive training in the following three areas: 1) the design, analysis and interpretation of longitudinal cohort studies; 2) the use of imaging biomarkers for the assessment of health disparities and their impact on the development of comorbidities and outcomes among vulnerable populations; and 3) the writing, reviewing and editing of manuscripts for submission to peer-reviewed scientific journals. Dr. Tonti will achieve these goals through a structured training plan that incorporates didactic coursework, directed readings, mentored laboratory and clinical research, and regular meetings with her mentorship and advisory team, as well as participation in professional development and career development workshops. Upon completion of this project, Dr. Tonti will be well positioned to become an independent researcher with expertise in the development, implementation and evaluation of interventions to reduce health disparities among underserved populations. PUBLIC HEALTH RELEVANCE: Research conducted by Dr. Tonti will determine the effect of clinically-relevant differences in dietary patterns (commonly observed in African Americans) on the development of obesity and related comorbidities. These findings can inform the development of healthy food/drink policies and programs targeted to underserved communities in the United States.
