The use of MSPs and .ZIP is the same as above, just change the extension from '.MSP' to '.ZIP'. MSPs are very convenient for .DSP and MSP. Because, you could use them as a DIY version of the app or you could use them with the original app. You could also publish your own MSP in the DAW app's Library/MSP Panel. A: NAudio is pretty much the one and only way to access API to read/write files and communicate between programs on Windows. Of course, that would require installing the .NET framework, and it isn't going to work on Linux or other *nix-based OSes. However, if you'd rather not install the .NET framework or use the .NET API, there are probably other (free) libraries or tools you can use instead. For example, you can probably find a DLL that works with a mono-compatible version of the API for your target OS; and there's often a .NET wrapper for every non-C# language. For example, for Windows, there's NAudio.Net (which is free for some uses), and the non-free NAudio.WINAPI. There's also NAudio.Interop.FAudio, which is available for Windows and Wine. You can also consider to unzip the .zip file you get; that's the fastest way to get to the .msp and .dll files. I hate to end an article by listing commercials, but I really am so disgusted with PETA's "Killer Products" commercials they chose to show me. There are two PETA's in my hometown and both have always had a lot of followers. Maybe their school advertising wasn't showing the most reasonable picture to get their point across, but I don't think they are. According to their web site, their very first "National Campaign" is called "Killer Products". These are the products the PETA's are in favor of: This is one of the first web sites I found after searching the internet for information about PETA's and I was shocked. There were so many movies and books about this group and now, after viewing this "National Campaign", I wonder what else could shock me. I called a few friends to inform them 82138339de
