I have an Angular component that has input and output variables. I want the input to change in a certain condition and for the output to change when a certain other condition is met. Is there an Angular way of tracking the previous state of these components? So that I don't have to look at an input and output variable to determine their state. I was thinking something like a boolean flag that can be changed each time it is referenced, or setting it to a class member? A: Use a pipe to store and compare the previous values. Angular provides the CanDeactivate guard for this situation. Sub-clinical rheumatoid arthritis. Sub-clinical rheumatoid arthritis (SRA) and auto-immune/inflammatory conditions other than rheumatoid arthritis (RA) have recently attracted considerable interest. The role of non-RA auto-immune/inflammatory conditions in the etiology of RA has not been fully established. Establishing the importance of other autoimmune/inflammatory conditions as risk factors for the development of RA is important, because they are considered to be treatable. Patients with SRA have been observed to develop RA at an earlier age. We found that patients with SRA had higher IgM rheumatoid factor (IgM-RF) and were more likely to have a family history of RA than healthy controls. We also found that patients with SRA had a higher prevalence of anti-cyclic citrullinated peptide antibodies (ACPA) than patients with RA. There are still many unanswered questions regarding SRA. The correct and effective management of SRA should be established,
