[show more] SimplePercussion can be used as a metronome while SimplePiano is being played. It has 47 percussion instruments that can play in a loop of up to 70 beats. The current version of SimplePercussion offers 2 loops of 30 beats or less per file for use as a metronome. As with all loops, the beats will align automatically. The actual tempo of the music can be set to any value from -16% to +16% of the current speed. If there is no tempo specified, the tempo will be calculated automatically with the current speed. Since the beats are determined by the BPM of the SimplePiano music, if you change the tempo, the beats may need to be recalculated, or the beats may need to be shifted. The tempos of the instruments are set from 6.5% to 27% of the current speed. If there is no tempo specified, the tempo will be calculated automatically with the current tempo setting. If you wish to use the 6.5% speed, you must use the -16% - 6.5% - +16% function, which will result in the 6.5% of the current speed. The effects of the metronome are automatically reversed. You are able to find the metronome's key that was assigned for each loop by selecting the button labeled "Loop" and then "Setup". The sample line will appear in blue above the metronome text. See the buttons on the Sample Line for more information. SimplePercussion has an optional ramp function. You may set this function to play the loop from the lower beat to the higher beat. If a loop is used as a metronome, the ramp function will be disabled. The metronome is exclusive to the SimplePercussion instrument. As such, the metronome can not be used with the SimplePiano instrument. SimplePercussion has no features other than the metronome. The metronome is deactivated by selecting the checkbox in the Option Bar. The time signature for the SimplePercussion loop is fixed to 4/4. It is possible for the metronome to be too fast. When this occurs, the tempo will be set to 0% when the metronome is selected. The loops have the same length, where the time is doubled. For example, you can play loops
