1. 1 Open Photoshop. You have two choices: Either start a new document or open an existing one. For information on opening an existing file, see Book IV Chapter 6. If you want to start a new file, click the New button, in the upper-right corner, to open the dialog box shown in Figure 2-6. FIGURE 2-6: Click

New to start a new document. 2. 2 Name the new file. You can use any name you like, but you should name the document something meaningful, such as `my wedding photograph.psd`. 3. 3 Choose a target size. The Target Size option is located in the bottom-right corner of the dialog box shown in the previous bullet. Choose a size from the menu bar, in the bottom-left corner of the dialog box, labeled in Figure 2-7.

This size determines the minimum image dimension that you will create.
For example, a Target Size of 1920 × 1080px (two megapixels) determines the maximum image size. If your camera has a resolution of 4 megapixels or less, your maximum image size can be less than two megapixels. For example, if the camera provides only a 1.3-megapixel resolution (300 × 200 pixels), you can end up with an image that's less than two megapixels — sometimes less than one megapixel — in size. Be aware, however, that cropping an image (see Book IV, Chapter 6) is a separate process than resizing an image. If you crop an image, you do so at an offset that occurs in the `_cropped_` image file; you can resize an image without cropping it.

4. 4 Choose a resolution. 4 Click the Current Resolution button and choose a resolution from the pop-up menu, as shown in Figure 2-7. It's possible that you don't want to set a new resolution, and if that's the case, you don't need to go through this step.
5. 5 Set the pixel format. 5 The Pixel Format option determines how color components are interpreted in the image. You can access this option by clicking the Pixel Format button, as shown in Figure 2-7. As the name implies, the choices are RGB (Red, Green, and Blue) and grayscale (no colors)

Contents show] Adobe Photoshop - Professional Photo Editing software Adobe Photoshop, the professional photo-editing software made by Adobe is an extremely popular image editing tool for photographers and graphic designers. Photoshop Elements is the only full-featured free photo editor available to users who do not have Photoshop. Applying Filter Effects to Images You can apply filter effects to images to add a grunge, blur, or artistic effect. Photoshop Elements helps you choose the filter effects that work best on your images. To apply a filter effect: Right click the photo Click the Camera Raw button Click Filter Choose the Filters, Adjustments, or Effects you want to apply Click OK You can apply up to 15 filter effects to your photo. You cannot apply them to the entire photo like you can in Photoshop. Note: For some people it is easiest to copy your photo and paste it into Photoshop (or Photoshop Elements) for editing. If you are not comfortable doing this, you can change your settings to apply filter effects directly to the file. This process will appear in the Edit menu (under Edit), and is more convenient than converting the file. See Edit menu on the Edit tab for more information. Filters The first thing you will notice about Photoshop Elements is that there are more filter options than in Photoshop.

Cropping Images You can crop images to remove backgrounds, close up or add a border around the photo. You have two choices for cropping your photos. The first option gives you a rectangular selection box and you can crop your image into the box. To crop the image: Left click the image Click the Crop tool (black arrow) Click and drag the box to change the shape of the crop area. You can move the cropping tool by holding down the Ctrl (Command) key while you click and drag. To remove the crop area, press and hold Ctrl, click the Crop tool, and drag to the outside edge of the image. To change the area around the image, use the Hand tool (white arrow) to draw a new box. To finish the crop, press Alt (Option) and click OK. You can crop the image to remove the margins. This is an easy way to see what your image will look like without cropping it first. To crop the image to Originating in the 1800's, a deep moccasin is a functional shoe meant to mimic the look of the original Native American footwear. Here at Puma, we have recreated the tradition with the Duruga moccasin. With a modern silhouette, and a hint of Native American influence, the Duruga is available in a variety of colors and materials. Puma Duruga Color: Black/White, Size: 10.5 M/93W Puma Duruga Milling Process: An advanced French artisan is used to pickle the leather, since this process allows for the leather to be pulled away from the grain, producing greater overall comfort. Puma Duruga Quality: We know that when it comes to footwear, you want nothing but the best. That is why the Duruga uses only the finest leathers and fasteners, many of which are stitched by hand in the USA. Furthermore, Duruga footwear uses a wide array of stitching (double and triple stitching and even corn stitching) to ensure a high quality product.

What's New in the?

Ludbrook Castle Ludbrook Castle is a 17th-century manor house in Ludbrook near Pontnewynydd in the county of Gwynedd, Wales. The original Tudor mansion house was built by George Rees of Ewenny Priory, Gwynedd in 1562. In 1601 it was purchased by William Evans of Cardiff. The Evans family were to build a large new house on the site of the older mansion, incorporating part of the older building. In the early 17th century, the mansion was sold to Theophilus Lloyd, a merchant from Crickhowell. The mansion house, also named Ludbrook House, was enlarged in the 18th century. It was a large building designed to impress visitors, containing a saloon, gallery, library, dining room and dining room. It was built in the Palladian style and renovated by Thomas Coke in 1735 for the marriage of his son, Sir Thomas Coke, to Frances Lloyd, daughter of the 4th Baron Lloyd and co-heir to the estate. Ludbrook was the birthplace of Sir John Philipps, 1st Bt. who acquired the estate in 1796. The original mansion house was demolished in 1727. The new main house was built by Thomas Coke in 1735. It was a two-storey, pedimented house, built on a stone basement. It had crenellated parapets and a curved central entrance. In 1740-41, the house was extended and the gallery, dining room and library were rebuilt. Thomas Coke also added his coat of arms, which was painted over that of Lloyd. Thomas Coke had married Frances Philipps, daughter of Frances and Sir John Philipps, 1st Bt. in 1735. He died in 1739 leaving Ludbrook to Frances and Thomas Coke. Thomas Coke died in 1754 and Ludbrook was purchased by a partnership between the Philippses, who were his first cousins. In 1766 Ludbrook was purchased by John Thomas, eldest son of Thomas Coke, the 2nd Baron Kensington. Thomas Coke's grandson, George Coke, inherited Ludbrook from his uncle Thomas Coke in 1801 and then had it split into Ludbrook Park and Ludbrook House. In 1914 Ludbrook was acquired by John Rees, 1st Baron Rees. The house and estate came into the ownership of the Cooke family after the marriage of John Thomas Coke's son, Charles Coke, 1st Baron
