1. Open the file you want to work on. Photoshop is a program designed for editing raster images, so you need to open a raster image file. This is usually done in the Photoshop Organizer, which opens any raster image format. The Organizer is discussed in Chapter 4. If you want to open a JPEG image, you must do so in another program, such as Windows Picture and Fax Viewer. However, you can also open a JPEG image in the Organizer. If you want to open a PDF image, you must use Adobe Acrobat or its free reader to convert the PDF to a TIFF or RGB file. You open a Photoshop file from either the Organizer or the File drop-down menu (Figure 8-1 shows the File menu. In a new document, there's a From Files and Folders button to get to the Photoshop Organizer. If you open a document from the Organizer, you find the File drop-down menu in the upper-left corner.) 2. Choose File → Open to open the image in the program. Figure 8-1; Choosing a file from the File menu. # YOU'RE LUCKY IF YOU CAN FIND A FORUM If you enjoy helping others online, you might try joining a forum to do so. A forum is a place where you and others post messages for others to read or comment on, and you can chat in private about your experiences and concerns in a specific area. One of the best places to look for Photoshop help is the Adobe Support Web site at www.adobe.com/support. You can find Photoshop help at many other places, too, including the Adobe Community Forums at www.adobe.com/forums. You can search for answers using the search box on the main page of the forums, or use the search feature to find other people asking about the same problem you're having. If the problem you have doesn't involve Photoshop, you should post it on the Adobe Forums (available at www.adobe.com/forums), where others can help you with your problem. 3. Optionally, change the default file name of the file from (for example) PS6.jpg to something you might remember or use. If you don't do this, Adobe automatically assigns the next number in the sequence to your image when it

With a World Cup done and dusted, English football fans can look forward to another season of matches being played in Europe. The first match day at the 51st time of asking is when Chelsea welcome West Ham. And we will also welcome back the likes of Andros Townsend and Wijnaldum... a winning trophy team with the (what will be forever) very familiar singing of 'Jack' the Jockey... And yet... But for the first time since 1976 we are not playing at Villa Park. We have decided to move our training camp and warm ups to Baku so as to improve the quality and intensity of the summer squad and also prepare for the new way of playing for English football - the big competitions will be played over a longer period. It is therefore very likely that the first two games in that new schedule will be two teams which will never be associated with a traditional British summer. We will have be in Europe for the first time since 1976 and for the second time in three years since we have had a winter break - but we will still play between June 7 and August 5. For the first time since 2010 we have a season without a single away Premier League fixture on a Sunday. It will be exciting. We have been discussing this change of timing with the Premier League in advance and were reassured that there will be no clashes at the start or end of the season, so we can plan around it. All matches will be played over 50 or 60 minutes and there will be no break for half-time. So how would our starting 11 be if we started tomorrow? 1) Didier Drogba will slot in at centre forward, with Cristiano Ronaldo a little further forward and the new German signing, Almami Moreira also pushing forward. 2) Branislav Ivanovic will guard the back four. 3) Ashley Cole will take up position beside the ball, ready to receive. 4) Kante will be in the middle with Fabregas on his left and a newly returned Mesut Ozil on his right. 5) Huddlestone will play as one of the central midfielders alongside Wootton, the English stopper will be flanked by Nasri and Ramsey. 6) The full backs will have an extra man on each flank, with Cesar Azpilicueta defending and Townsend on the opposite wing. Evaluation of cardiac output monitoring methods in general intensive care: a systematic review and meta-analysis. Various monitoring devices have been used in general intensive care. We assessed whether the method of cardiac output (CO) measurement using a pulmonary artery catheter affects morbidity and mortality in patients requiring intensive care. A MEDLINE, EMBASE, and CENTRAL search was performed until September 2013. We included randomized trials comparing different CO monitoring methods in patients requiring intensive care and reported clinically relevant outcomes. Major adverse events (composite of death, myocardial infarction, acute coronary syndrome, stroke, arrhythmia, need for intervention, and need for cardiopulmonary resuscitation), hospital mortality, and clinical outcomes were evaluated. Heterogeneity was assessed using the I(2) statistic. Data on study quality were assessed using the Cochrane risk of bias tool. We included 20 studies, 14 in patients after cardiac surgery and 6 in patients receiving mechanical ventilation. Compared with intermittent thermodilution, continuous CO monitoring underestimated CO by 7 mL/min (95% confidence interval, 1-13). Low CO was not associated with mortality. Subgroup analyses showed that continuous monitoring was associated with a higher need for fluid administration and a higher incidence of acute kidney injury. Continuous cardiac output monitoring was associated with a higher need for fluid administration and acute kidney injury. The 2016 NFL draft is still underway, and things are starting to get more interesting. The Panthers have started making moves and trying to add more players to an already loaded roster. They added former Alabama quarterback Jacoby Brissett, former San Francisco linebacker Bobby Wagner, and former Buffalo safety Jordan Poyer to its group of defensive backs on Thursday. "They were two of the best safeties in the country," Panthers GM Marty Hurney said, via FOX Sports' Alex Marvez. "They are good football players that are at the top of their game right now. Those are two of the best safeties in the country. We're happy to add those guys to our group." Poyer left Buffalo as a free agent after the 2015 season, and Wagner was released by the 49ers before the free agency period opened. Neither will be a problem for the Panthers, as they'll be ready to provide immediate help to the secondary. Wagner, 24, was the 13th-overall pick in the 2012 draft and spent five seasons in San Francisco. Despite being a good all-around safety, he was rarely asked
