really good one. The problem is that it is published in a non-briefing journal, so it probably won't get read by many practitioners. The paper deals with an interesting topic (use of statutory fiduciary duties), and we think it is important for practitioners to know what the courts are up to. On the other hand, it is probably more useful for practitioners to read about how the courts will apply fiduciary duties in order to determine what matters to raise on appeal. The paper presents a summary of how the courts have applied fiduciary duties to the attorneys hired by foreign sovereigns, and why they are irrelevant to the case before the court. What is more of interest to practitioners is how the courts have applied American fiduciary duties (which are not codified). But read the whole paper.

Oral administration of entrapped in situ bioencapsulated cells attenuates and prevents streptozotocin-induced diabetes mellitus. Cell bioencapsulation permits cells to be delivered to their site of action. The bio-optimized multilayered hollow fibrous scaffolds used to encapsulate porcine islet cells in situ were evaluated and developed for oral delivery of insulin-producing cells. In this study, we encapsulated porcine islet cells in situ with fibrin glue using a multilayered fibrous scaffold. The effect of the cellular microenvironment on islet cell viability was evaluated by exposing pre-established fibrin networks to different culture media for up to 28 days. The ability of the bio-encapsulated islet cells to prevent streptozotocin-induced diabetes in a rodent model was evaluated. After 28 days in culture in either medium A or medium B, fibrin scaffold incubation with medium B increased the transmembrane electrical resistance of the scaffolds compared with scaffolds incubated in medium A. Cellular viability was significantly higher in scaffolds incubated in medium B compared with medium A, indicating a positive effect of the scaffold on

6,5,11.16,19.1..July 13, 2012 Darkness to Light In the midst of a very dark time for me, I cannot imagine a better way for light to appear than the film "Darkness to Light". The movie is so good, so uplifting and perfect for me, to receive the message of hope and healing it brings. [I began to break down as I wrote this. The darkness is around. The light within is growing. I am keeping that in my thoughts, as I type.] The story is of a young boy, who has faced all kinds of opposition from the world, most likely including his family, and is finally asked by the Lord to trust in him and come home. This is a message of hope, and faith. My journey took me from the most painful and dark place, to a place of light and healing. I was given a tremendous gift, when the Lord opened my heart to serve, as I was initially serving him in my workplace. I am now having the joy of having the greatest employment ever, in a place where my spiritual growth has been met with continued joy, and a great desire to grow and learn, and the Lord has been amazingly gracious. I am to learn to trust him with all of my affairs, and I am learning to have faith. The movie has been nominated for an Academy award
