How to install this extension

To install this extension on Google Chrome, click the Google Chrome menu on top right of your browser, and then click the "Extensions" option Once you're in the Google Chrome extension browser, find "Noncontiguous Text Selection" on the extension category. The page will be a simple list of the extensions available. Click the extension name to install it.

How to use this extension

Once you've installed the extension, you'll find two menu icons on top right of the browser: an ink drop and the extension icon. Selecting the latter will open a context menu where you can see the three options (Copy With Newlines, Copy With Spaces, Copy With Bullets). Selecting any of them will start a procedure which starts with making a selection and ends with the paste action. Don't click on the extension icon if you're doing it for the first time. For a second time, start from an already non-continuous text selection and then click on the context menu's icon to get the options presented earlier.

What's New in the?

Noncontiguous Text Selection is a simple Firefox extension that enables non-continuous multiple selection of text. The extension can enable you to place new lines between selected elements, optionally insert spaces or bullets between text elements. It can paste selected text on new lines or in the same line with optional spacing, or bullets in the middle of each line. You can even split any word on a line into multiple words with a simple operation. Your options for multi-selection can also be customized. This extension can be used in conjunction with other extension such as Google Suggest or Synonyms. The most important feature of this extension is that your selected text can be pasted on a single line, with bullet points, on new lines, or with spaces. Some of the features and plugins are out of date and are no longer supported or actively updated. Please note that many of them may be included in a different version of the plugin. Please refer to the plugin's GitHub page to verify if it has been updated. The developer's description says, "Noncontiguous Text Selection is a simple Firefox extension that enables non-continuous multiple selection of text". Actually, it doesn't allow you to select multiple blocks of text and paste them in new lines. You cannot select text like in Word on Windows. All you can do is select the text using "Ctrl", and select the same piece of text once more to separate the selected block of text into two pieces. It doesn't work with Google Chrome. You can use it with Firefox, but only if you define which language is most suitable (either English, or Japanese, or...
