Hi All, Fellow Gun Owners. I have been formulating a different style method for calculating the number of rounds you require to do certain things with your gun. It is broken down into two areas: A) On and off the range. and B) on the range

A) On and off the range: After you hit the range, you have three things you need to think about. 1. Setup How do you set up for your next session? There are different levels to the sport of shooting, I include my opinion on this below. 1) Just hunting, if your hunting and your gun isn't broken, then you shouldn't be shooting it outside of the 500 yard range at 200-300 yards. 2) Target shooting; You need to fine tune your gun; test it and shoot it. 3) Plinking/Practicing/Practicing for precision. You need to plan out the best method for your gun on a regular basis or you will end up with bad habits. Here is my opinion on this. There are three basic "modes" you can use when shooting for your personal time, which are: 1) Tactical. 2) Practicing - if you are practicing for precision or a match 3) Fun - shooting for fun and just killing time. So where do we start? First, you need to know what your goal is? Is it precision, is it speed, is it accuracy or is it fun? Do you need to get quicker, do you need to get more accurate, are you looking for the kill or just for fun? Do you have the time to practice? You need to know these things. If you are shooting alone, you need to decide what you want to accomplish, the accuracy, the speed, precision, fun or all of the above. If you have a family, plan out how you can do it so
