The company was initially developed by a student as he learned that his friends were having difficulties with the sharing of the videos they captured with their mobile devices. This lack of communication was giving rise to a great amount of problems as it was difficult to show the videos to other people without them resulting in a huge loss of time. This became more of an issue as the number of videos being uploaded was growing. Fortunately, a new invention had been put in place to address this problem. Although the company has not announced what exactly this invention was, it goes without saying that they produced a nifty application called CutoMe that allows you to share videos you have captured. Although the app is completely free, it requires a paid membership to convert the selected videos. This means you are not only able to trim the videos for sharing, you are also able to convert them to the type of the screenshot. Moreover, this company is so confident of their creation that they have no qualms about making the application absolutely free. As a result, you get to enjoy the amazing features of CutoMe for free. So, if you are interested in the power of CutoMe, you should consider buying the program. While there are no points, likes and followers to mess with, this is the social media version of the likes.
