Histamine was administered subcutaneously to the animals of the 1st, 2nd and 3d groups, into the stomach of animals of the 4th group by intraduodenal injection. The animals of the 2nd group received L-carnitine orally for 14 days. L-carnitine was administered in a dose of 100 mg/kg body weight to the animals of the 3rd group. Within 2 h, 25 mg of histamine was administered to animals of the 1st and 2nd groups. Histamine was administered to animals of the 3rd and 4th groups after 14 days of L-carnitine administration. The time course of mucosal lesion development in the duodenum was determined after the administration of histamine. Histamine administration to the duodenum induced mucosal lesions in all groups. The mucosal lesions developed most intensively in the stomach. No mucosal lesions were observed in the duodenum. At the site of action of histamine, L-carnitine accelerated mucosal lesion development, which was not observed when L-carnitine was administered orally. The data obtained show that L-carnitine increases the sensitivity to histamine.{.151} {.152} {.153} {.154}
