In late June, Black Desert Online patch 2.3 made its way onto the servers, which means that we have a few more months before the next major expansion will release. To give the player base a bit of time to prepare and to take some load off the developers, we have decided to release some of the recent quality-of-life updates. Included here are a few updates that players might find useful. However, you should know that everything is a work in progress and that we will be continuing to work on the game as we move forward. Note: If you are using an ANT+ dongle, you will need to disconnect it or disconnect your rig when you start up the game. We will update the patch notes when necessary. This switch will have no effect unless you have a low-end graphics card. If you have a high-end graphics card, then this switch will just turn it off. * Cursor Settings: Activate this setting in the Graphics Settings menu. Here you can set up how the cursor moves in the game. You can also set up how the cursor blinks.
