In this Photoshop ELS image tutorial you will learn the basics of photo editing in Elements and make your very own black and white woodland image. Before you start: the image you need to follow the steps in this Photoshop ELS image tutorial is found here. Make sure to download the high-resolution image for printing. 1. Open Photoshop ELS Open the image in Photoshop Elements and follow the steps to open the image in the program. You can download Photoshop Elements in a wide range of different file formats including.dng,.tiff,.sgi,.psd,.exr,.ngb, and.rw2. There are a few things that you should be aware of before you open the image in Photoshop Elements. The image needs to be in a format that can be opened in Photoshop Elements. For this tutorial I used.psd format but in the section "Image formats" I've listed some of the formats you can use that also work in Photoshop Elements. Pretend you are creating a print out for a birthday card for example. There is no need for you to resize the image if the card is going to be printed at the correct size. Select the "Image Size" option from the Adobe menu bar and change the dimensions of the image to 297 x 420 pixels. 2. Create a new folder You need to create a folder inside your image folder where you will store the files you create in this tutorial. The folder you use is not important, but I recommend the name "black and white woodland". Navigate to the location where you want to save the folder (Create a new folder if you have a hard drive or use the "Create Document" option for a removable drive). The path to the folder will be: C:/Users///black and white/ 3. Create a new document Start a new document in Photoshop ELS and name it "black and white woodland". The file will be saved in the "black and white" folder you just created. 4. Set the view All files opened in Elements are opened in a viewer view. This means that for the image you are editing you will see the file in a small area at the bottom. This image 388ed7b0c7

A. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to the field of soybean breeding. In particular, the invention relates to the novel soybean variety A1011946. B. Description of Related Art The goal of field crop breeding is to combine various desirable traits in a single variety/hybrid. Such desirable traits include greater yield, better stalks, better roots, resistance to insecticides, herbicides, pests, and disease, tolerance to heat and drought, reduced time to crop maturity, better agronomic quality, higher nutritional value, and uniformity in germination times, stand establishment, growth rate, maturity, and fruit size. Breeding techniques take advantage of a plant's method of pollination. There are two general methods of pollination: a plant self-pollinates if pollen from one flower is transferred to the same or another flower of the same plant. A plant cross-pollinates if pollen comes to it from a flower on a different plant. Corn plants (Zea mays L.) can be bred by both self-pollination and cross-pollination. Both types of pollination involve the corn plant's flowers. Corn has separate male and female flowers on the same plant, located on the tassel and the ear, respectively. Natural pollination occurs in corn when wind blows pollen from the tassels to the silks that protrude from the tops of the ear shoot. Plants that have been self-pollinated and selected for type over many generations become homozygous at almost all gene loci and produce a uniform population of true breeding progeny, a homozygous plant. A cross between two such homozygous plants produces a uniform population of hybrid plants that are heterozygous for many gene loci. Conversely, a cross of two plants each heterozygous at a number of loci produces a population of hybrid plants that differ genetically and are not uniform. The resulting non-uniformity makes performance unpredictable. The development of uniform corn plant hybrids requires the development of homozygous inbred plants, the crossing of these inbred plants, and the evaluation of the crosses. Pedigree breeding and recurrent selection are examples of breeding methods used to develop hybrid parent plants from breeding populations. Those breeding methods combine the genetic backgrounds from two or more inbred plants or various other broad-based sources into breeding pools from which new inbred plants are developed by selfing and selection of desired phenotypes. The new inbreds are crossed with other for 24 h. At 48 h, HeLa cells were harvested, and total RNAs and proteins were extracted. The expression of miR-21 in HeLa cells and PANC-1 cells was examined using real-time RT-PCR (a). Proteins extracted from the indicated cells were subjected to Western blot analysis using specific antibodies (b). (TIF)
