Camfrog Pro Keygen † Camfrog Pro Crack Windows Free Download Camfrog.Q: how can I split a string to an array of strings depending on the characters in the array? say I have a string: testString = "this is my string i would like to split into an array of strings like this: this = first is = second my = third string = fourth" how can I split this string into an array based on every instance of the characters in the string, and assign the array to a variable? is there an easier way than what I'm about to do? in my case, these strings all have different lengths and I will also need to deal with cases where there are more items in the string thanks A: split(regex) uses the regex '[\s|]+?' - which matches any one or more whitespace characters plus any characters. So, if you have: $myArray = str_split('this is my string i would like to split into an array of strings like this: this = first is = second my = third string = fourth', '[\s|]+'); then $myArray will contain the following sub-arrays: first is my string /* * This file is part of the UCB release of Plan 9.
