If you're looking for a solution that brings together elements of Illustrator and Photoshop, Paint Shop Pro Premium has many of the tools you need. Adobe offers a free version of PS Premier (www.adobe.com/products/ps/premier/free.html). This package, however, lacks many of Photoshop's features. It is best for beginners who want to keep painting with the look of Photoshop. Photoshop's enormous popularity is reflected in the fact that most graphic designers who don't know Photoshop tend to fall into a few commonly made mistakes: Poor image resolution: For print, a pixel-based resolution of 72 dots per inch (dpi) is sufficient, but for the Web you need a much higher resolution so that an image doesn't require multiple passes to download and view. A pixel-based size of 300 DPI is what's commonly recommended for Web graphics. Poorly composed composition: A pixel-based image almost always has a white space on each side, so images can end up being quite large. In some cases, some picture-editing applications don't automatically adjust the width and height of an image, so it might end up being that you don't have the right proportions, resulting in a poor composition. Another aspect of composition to look out for is whether the colors have a high contrast ratio between them, so that they look brighter when they're next to each other, as shown in Figure 5-6. Figure 5-6: A high contrast in colors makes it possible to read the text. Poor cropping: Images can be cropped properly with a set of guides that let you position the object easily on the edge of the canvas. Often, the edge of the canvas does not have a specific line to match it, so if you crop improperly, you can end up with odd results, such as a top-to-bottom crop, as shown in Figure 5-7. Figure 5-7: Cropping is a critical step, but often isn't done right. Illustrator Illustrator is the older of the two graphic-design applications, and is considered by many to be more of a traditional artist's tool, while Photoshop is a more modern image-editing solution. Illustrator is a vector-based program, which means that an object's dimensions are measured in pixels rather than by the number of dots that make up a physical line. This means that if an object

Q: I run a docker container on my laptop and if the IP changes, Docker updates the container's IP? I am trying to run a container on my local laptop which has changed IPs between each successive start/reboot. I notice that Docker updates the container IP. This is what I see in docker-compose logs: $ docker-compose logs ERROR: Cannot connect to Upstream - Error while dialing dial tcp 172.17.0.1:2376: connect: connection refused ERROR: Cannot connect to Upstream - Error while dialing dial tcp 172.17.0.1:2376: connect: connection refused A: Can you check if the network the docker host is currently using is actually active with ip link? Check that the docker host is on the same network and you're passing the container a container's private IP address that's out of the same range as that of the docker host. Existing features of phytoplankton community dynamics in a Mediterranean estuary. A quantitative phytoplankton survey was carried out at four stations in the western Mediterranean Sea, to evaluate the existing features of the structure of the phytoplankton community as a response to physical and biological factors. Species density, biovolume, and epiphyton were used as descriptive variables for a phytoplankton community and were compared among the stations and within each station over the survey period. The temporal and spatial variability of environmental factors such as salinity, temperature, turbidity, light, nitrate, nitrite, phosphate, silicate, and oxygen, was also explored. The results showed that the greatest differences in the structure of the phytoplankton community were observed among the stations, not among different periods within the stations, which indicates that the phytoplankton community was adapted to its environmental conditions. Light, nitrate, silicate, and turbidity influenced this adaptation, whereas light was the major factor, as all of the other variables were less significant. There was a correlation between the linear dimensions of the main phytoplankton groups and the physical characteristics of the estuary. Q: Are language name preferences' recommendation questions' or opinion based? I am in a position that I need to assign a .NET developer, a PHP developer, a MS Office developer and a GIS developer to a project. These developers are all freelancers and they are all equally competent and I've no idea who to pick. I've never worked with them before and it makes me really nervous to put them on an extremely expensive and time consuming project. My questions are: What percentage of programmers are in what language? Does this vary significantly by country? My experience is that a significant percentage of programmers are Microsoft oriented. Is there some data or any established studies relating to what programmers prefer by language? Anecdotaly, I have heard that freelance .NET developers work more for Microsoft shops, PHP developers work more for banks and credit card companies. Is there any data to back this up? A: You should take a look at Job Seekers Stack Exchange for this kind of question. If you have an account there, you can search for the site by language using the search box on the top right. As per the help center, such questions belong on either Stack Overflow or Programmers SE. You can also ask this on Programmers SE since it is tagged .NET and PHP. Now, you can get some interesting data using the following query: Which returns: a) 3296 reputation points. b) 33.12 hours. c) 1 year ago. d) 1 to 10 answers. e) 4.9k questions. Now, if you filter the above query by language: a) 1291 reputation points. b) 41.27 hours. c) 1 year ago. d) 1 to 5 answers. e) 509 questions. The data can be slightly older than it is in some cases. You can also try searching for other languages as well. For instance, there are about 330 reputation points to be earned by answering questions on Java and about 15 hours spent answering questions on Python. Q: Subset by variable (slicing) in the same dataset I have a dataset with a structure like this: Name
