US President Donald Trump intends to invoke the Logan Act against former FBI lawyer Lisa Page and former FBI agent Peter Strzok for their contact with former FBI Director James Comey, The Hill reported Friday. Trump reportedly plans to read the section of the US Code that would punish them for unauthorized interactions with government officials on either foreign or domestic affairs. A draft of the Logan Act reads: Whoever, without authority of the United States, directly or indirectly commences or carries on any correspondence or intercourse with any foreign government or any officer or agent thereof, with intent to influence the measures or conduct of any foreign government or of any officer or agent thereof, in relation to any disputes or controversies with the United States or to defeat the measures of the United States, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both. The Logan Act was passed in 1799 and does not appear to be used since, but it was considered by a federal judge who said that the language of the law still applied to the internet age. It was upheld in a case in 2006 that involves a Tennessee man named Marcus Cherry who ran a website titled "Redrawing The Map," which promoted secessionist sentiments and also reached out to then-judge Alito to discuss a possible Supreme Court appointment, which he said was unpatriotic. It was upheld again in a ruling from the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in 2009 that involves a man named Anthony Pellicano who acted as a covert FBI informant against organized crime in California. If the US Justice Department files a formal complaint or summons with the US State Department against Page and Strzok for violating the Logan Act, it would be the first time that the law has been used in connection with official communications. The act was named after the lawyer William Logan who was prosecuted for his interactions with former British Prime Minister William Pitt. Logan would later be acquitted of the charges. What's New In?

Polling is set to begin from April 12 in five of the six states in April 11th Presidential polls, according to the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting. Counting will take place on April 19th. If a party or alliance receives a majority of just over 30 per cent of the national votes — the required majority — it is deemed to form the government. In the event of less than a majority, the President may decide whether to call the result of the election as "election not-held", which will not trigger any immediate action. The constitution stipulates that if there is a tie in the popular vote, the candidate who received the most votes in the election to the state legislative assembly should be proclaimed the winner. The results of the state elections are expected to be known between April 24 and 28. Authorities in the Muslim-majority Maldives are gearing up for April elections amid growing fears that a week-old coup may trigger a bloodbath. Vice-President Yameen Abdul Gayoom declared a state of emergency on Thursday, a week after troops stormed the presidential palace, and the decision is expected to trigger a vote on April 13. Police and army units have locked down much of the capital and placed thousands of people under arrest. Al Jazeera's special report on the Maldives offers a rare insight into why the island nation, ruled by former president Mohamed Nasheed since he came to power in 2008, is on the brink of a political crisis that may yet split it into two. The video was "retaliatory" and "aimed at domestic politics", the former president said, adding that he was convinced the former Justice Minister Abdulla Muaz Ali accused him of electoral fraud. President Nasheed has previously denied claims of electoral fraud made by political opponents, but his government has been accused of abusing its power. "There is a sense of a climate of escalation, of rising tension, of growing anxiety," former Justice Minister Muaz told Al Jazeera. A UN envoy who visited the Maldives last week said the government in the Indian Ocean archipelago of roughly 330,000 people had used "excessive force" against its people. In a video uploaded on Twitter, President Gayoom told supporters to keep their "calm and patience". "We are facing a difficult phase of our history. The government will be changed," he said in the video. Maldives election Leading
