Many people are unaware that there are incredibly inexpensive home-cage feeders for dogs and cats. The cage feeders are a great idea for people that don't want to invest in an outside feeder. These feeders can be set up for a single, or multiple, small- to medium-size birds. Flexible Feeder A flexible feeder is a great choice for people with pets that are on a limited feeding regimen. They are highly customizable, so you can change the type of food, from a solid- or liquid-based to something that is little more than an energy bar. Appropriate for Pets of Different Size It doesn't matter how big the pet is, all of the cage feeders come with an easy to adjust height. This allows you to get the optimal height for the proper feeding routine. Easy to Clean All the cage feeders have removable top food bowls for quick cleaning. These feeders can be sterilized with boiling water, dish soap and a little elbow grease and are virtually ready to be used again. Ideal for Cats The cage feeders are designed for cats. These feeders work well for cats of different sizes because the feeder is adjustable. Cats that love to perch and lounge are frequently bored and become destructive when they don't have a good enough place to hang out. Super Pet Feeder Products The Super Pet Feeder Products cat feeder is designed to look good, but still do the job of providing fresh food for your furry friend. It comes in a variety of design configurations that are perfect for your cat's feeding style and kibble preference. The feeder is made of durable plastic and has a maximum capacity of 20 lbs of dry food. It is on sale for just $18.99 during the promo period, but you don't have to wait to get yours./ * Copyright (c) 2008 Werner Mayer * *

Hematological and biochemical parameters as predictors of ischemic-type lesions of porcine livers perfused with hypertonic salt solutions. In a previous study, in vitro perfusion (IVP) of porcine livers was used to correlate the macroscopic and histopathological manifestations of ischemia with changes in biochemical and hematological parameters. The aim of the present study was to correlate these changes with the vascular and biochemical parameters in order to improve the predictive value of the previous study. Two sets of experiments were performed. In the first, IVP of the livers was carried out using the same protocol as in the previous study, except that a 3 M NaCl solution was used. The second set of experiments compared the ischemic damage of porcine livers perfused with Krebs-Ringer bicarbonate buffer (KRB) and a 3 M NaCl solution. As a control, the livers were perfused without ischemia. Specimens were evaluated histologically and biochemically every 15 min for 300 min. The pig livers were perfused with a 3 M NaCl solution. The biochemical and morphological parameters changed, with some showing a continuous increase after 90 min of perfusion (glycogen, lactate, ammonia, GPT, GOT, and LDH) and others showing a continuous decrease after 90 min of perfusion (total protein, albumin, and alkaline phosphatase). A three-stage model of morphological changes was used to characterize the livers. In the first stage, a macroscopic picture of well-preserved livers was obtained after 30 min of perfusion. During the second stage, macroscopic changes of variegated shape and size, such as lacerations, hemorrhages, and pale areas, appeared. Liver damage became most severe at 90 min, when the maximal values for GOT, LDH, GPT, and lactate were observed. The livers perfused with KRB showed macroscopic signs of damage (craters and lacerations) at 30 min. The histological changes were more pronounced in the livers perfused with 3 M NaCl, where the macroscopic damage was at 90 min, the major biochemical changes appeared at 120 min, and the histological damage was the most severe at 150 min. Blood pH and BE showed no differences between the two experimental protocols; in both cases, the maximal values were observed after 120 min of
