The P2P & Torrent Search Engine - MP3, Music, Video, Games, Software, Movies, Books, Magazines & More! Inner ear pathologies: neuroimaging and microsurgery. Our research group has been developing new techniques for microsurgery to treat inner ear pathologies. These techniques rely on the use of magnet resonance imaging and microsurgery in a combined approach for the study and treatment of inner ear disease. A detailed description of the surgical technique is given together with the advantages and disadvantages of the approach. To date, in vivo experimental research has been able to achieve long-lasting hearing preservation in the experimental animals, and preliminary clinical studies have demonstrated the potentiality of the new technique. Microsurgery is not an easy procedure; it requires a great deal of skill and a high degree of intellectual curiosity, but the results of a successful surgery can provide an improvement in the quality of life of the patient. Eich is apparently a man who uses the Internet far more than is advisable. Specifically, his wife, Eich tweeted a link to a Google image search which showed a pre-embarrassingly-unbathed Eich in the buff (with a tattoo of the logo for his company, Mozilla). And the image went viral, and a variety of people, both inside and outside of Mozilla, called for his resignation and were out in force to make that happen. The link was sent as a direct message to Annika about 3:40am Eastern Time on June 5th. I'd heard about this in the "life in tech" sense, and saw it when it happened, but only because Annika had tweeted it out. I personally wouldn't have cared about it if I hadn't been in the loop, but I'm very sorry I wasn't. Some more of his tweets and his very strange management style: Quote: Gossamer (@wgaseman) June 5, 2013 It's brilliant to learn from Eich that you can't control how people use things you create. Is a normal reaction to a friend sending you an image of their first-time bathing experience in which they are wearing multiple over-sized towels. I know, I know. I am being a crank
