PAGE 30. BLUE SCREEN DIAGNOSTICS OF MEDICAL IMPLANTS FOR EYE USE

Incorrect display of prescribed medical device(s) or lens power An ophthalmologist should be consulted if there is no improvement in vision.

influence of controlled substances Please consult with the prescribing ophthalmologist if using a medicine that may reduce your ability to see.

Prevention of eye infections

Antibiotic ointments and topical antibiotics are often prescribed for eye infection. To protect your vision, you should be tested periodically to ensure they are working. LENS

CATARACT Did you know....The eye is the most densely packed structure in the body? It's approximately a 2/3rd filled with different tissue. Your lens may be cloudy. This could be a temporary condition or a recurring problem. It is normal to see a halo around lights when using glasses or contact lenses. It's not a sign of a problem. Pressure and rubbing of the eye will often clear a cataract for a few seconds.

Cataracts will normally get worse as you age, so it is important to protect your vision now. Your doctor may have suggested taking some medicine to help slow down the cataract formation process. This may allow you to delay eye surgery. If you aren't happy with the amount of light your cataracts are blocking, you may need cataract surgery at some point in the future. LAX PLANE LENS The eye's anatomy gives us a limited ability to see anything far away. A lens replaces the natural lens in the eye to extend the focal length of the eye. It allows light to fall on your retina, which helps provide clear vision. It's made up of a soft and flexible plastic material. Lenses are available in many different shapes and colours to suit individual needs and tastes. Glass lenses are still the most common, but some lenses are plastic. FORESIGHT LENS * Age 40-50 Alternative splicing and phosphorylation of the ATP-regulated K+ channel (KATP) encoded by sulfonylurea receptor 1 (SUR1). An assessment by targeted mutation.

Voltage-gated K+ channels form key components of excitable tissues that have pore-forming K+ selective (K+) permeability pathways and a variety of regulatory (R) subunits. Channels have been subclassified into two groups: those that are inhibited and those that are activated by MgATP<sup>2-</sup>, MgATP/ADP-ribose- and guanosine-5'-triphosphate

of SUR1 to coexpress with the pancreatic K+ channel in Xenopus oocytes and analyzed the effect of MgATP. MgATP enhanced the K+ permeability of these channels. MgATP increased the current of K+ channels with SUR1-1 without affecting the current of channels that were expressed with SUR1-2. The increase in channel current was prevented by pretreatment of the channels with [ $\gamma$ -<sup>32</sup>P]MgATP and by inclusion of the specific antagonist N-benzyl-3-(p-azidophenyl)propionamide. The Croatians and Slovaks who helped build the largest motorway in the world in one of Europe's largest lakes, a new bar and a changing of the guard at the Miljacka bridge for Olympic sailing and motor racing in Rijeka are among the first natural tourist sights the region promises to offer. The first stretch of the Adriatic Highway, which is a road-railway crossing, began in 2010 after €3.6
