Follow our live blog of the event right here. Ahead of the release of the game, EA SPORTS worked with more than 50 different high-speed cameras to capture each player's movement during the friendly match against Argentina. Due to the complexity of the data set, a very precise, detailed analysis was required to ensure a consistent representation of the movements and the speeds and accelerations which applied to each player at any given time. A trained analysis team, including experts from industry, academia and academia, worked on a daily basis over a three-month period to transform the data into more understandable form. The result is a body of player data spanning a total of 3.5 million high-speed videos – each representing a single player of the 3,000-plus in the squad – and two terabytes of movement data. Using the data, the player motion capture team created “motion profiles” and “speed/acceleration profiles,” which were analyzed for each player and used to inform animation decisions. The data, as well as the built-in AI player intelligence, will be used by the developers to shape gameplay for each new game. “The whole process of collecting the data was a rigorous, complex and challenging experience,” said Yoshitaka Baba, FIFA Lead Scientist. “FIFA Ultimate Team players will have the opportunity to play the game with improved precision and intensity as a result. We believe the new technology has the potential to drive creativity in game play and is a step forward for FIFA as we continue to evolve and improve the FIFA experience.” Development of the technology has been in the works for several years, with the FIFA team first gaining early access to the data at FIFA World Cups through work on the official video game of the tournament. While each game engine has its own individual set of AI, data science and player modeling technology, FIFA's capture team used the provided tools to capture data from players in motion, allowing the development team to make new ways of thinking and creating a game that delivers improved depth and immersion. “As designers and programmers, we've been working on the different features of FIFA since it was still powered by Havok's 'Phenomic Technology,’” said Kostas Dimitropoulos, Producer, FIFA. “After the first FIFA World Cup in 2010 we were able to work side-by

FIFA is the most authentic way to play the beautiful game – just like in the World Cup™. The FIFA series has taken our players to the most prestigious tournaments in the world, featured the biggest stars and proven time and again that sports gaming can raise the bar. More than just a game – the FIFA series is a passion. To share that passion with you, FIFA is more than just a video game. It's a lifestyle. How is FIFA powered? The FIFA engine features a completely re-built artificial intelligence (A.I.) system. Thanks to a new formation recognition algorithm, AI players are now smarter, more reactive and more reactive than ever before. The engine also recognises opposition players in greater detail, improving the relationship between the game and the player. The result is smarter players that show off all their personality in the refereeing and in physical contests. Take on your friends in the brand new "Blitz" mode, where up to 32 players fight for the ball in a one-on-one match. Every touch of the ball alters the outcome of the game. It's fast-paced, intense and every touch counts. Try out the new "Real Player Motion Technology", which comes with an array of cutting-edge features in the animations, physique modelling and facial expressions. Make your opponents look like the stars they are. FIFA is also the most realistic real-world football experience available. The engine has been updated so that ball physics are now perfectly tuned to the pitch and to the real-world behaviour of the ball. And with the ball physics and player data, plus all other motion data being recorded, the game is fully playable with a handicap, even if you haven't trained with a club or country. What are the components of the game? FIFA 22 will include all the features that you've enjoyed throughout the past 13 versions of the series, including the all-new "Blitz" mode. Now up to 32 players can play all at once in a 1 vs 1 match - when one player has possession, the ball will pass to a new player to make it more difficult for the other players to get the ball. The player with possession will be able to take control of the ball in different ways, either by passing it, dribbling with one foot, or by a special skill like a tackle, chip or foul. There is also the "Blitz" ability, where you can kick
