Players now experience life-like, ball-based interaction. But there's more than just a football in your hands—every feature, from the delicate touch of a pass and a perfectly timed through ball, to the explosive power of a goal-scoring strike, has been driven by highly technical, player-based physics. These dynamics are set to be applied and developed through an organic, digital engineering system that has been built from the ground up. FIFA 20 had a hyper-realistic physics engine. FIFA 21 expands on this base to form the powerful and robust Digital Jockey engine. The power of this new virtual player system allows players to experience real-world physical forces and interactions with their team-mates, world-class players and surroundings as they compete to win. The new engine combines player data with the real, life-like movements of players on a pitch, making the authentic feeling of playing football a real possibility. This leads to gameplay that is one of the best out of any sports game. The FIFA Method This FIFA method looks to the future, placing a premium on player development. A dynamic player progression system and battle-training challenges are featured, as well as physical and tactical challenges, as players master new skills and approach the challenges of becoming a truly elite footballer. Every single facet of a player's skill set is tracked and assessed to keep the game relevant to modern footballers. The system runs in-depth tracking metrics based on a player's age. Biometrics are used to help assess and adapt players' behaviour patterns and key indicators of youth development. For the first time in FIFA, a player's visual traits have been assessed, and used as early detection for teeny pitch obsession. Development Trackers A number of different individual development trackers are put to use in FIFA 22, based on a range of different player attributes. The focus of these trackers is to gain a deeper insight into each player, providing better analysis and more flexibility to suit individual players' personal needs. The Character Evaluation system (CES) is used to analyse the physical traits, tackling and interaction patterns of a player. The revolutionary system includes a number of scorecards and evaluation 'lanes' across eight different key areas of technical, technical-tactical and physical development. FIFA 22 introduces a physical analysis system, based on more realistic player attributes. The maturity

FIFA is EA SPORTS' videogame adaptation of the FIFA franchise, developed for home consoles, handhelds and personal computers. The game is played by moving a player around a pitch, and kicking, trapping and heading the ball using either the analogue sticks or directional pad. Certain actions, such as passing, shooting and dribbling, are controlled with specific buttons on the control pad. Some controls are mapped to the d-pad or face buttons while others have their own dedicated buttons. The game can be played with one, two or three analog sticks. Who is playing FIFA? The FIFA series is the videogame adaptation of the renowned football game, and is currently played by some 30 million players all over the world. FIFA is one of the most popular football videogames in the world and has been dominating the console market since the release of FIFA 97 in 1996. Its main focus has always been the user experience, based on the feedback of the players to develop the most authentic game experience possible. How do you play FIFA? FIFA is played by moving the player around the field using the analogue sticks or the direction pad. The player controls the player using the directional pad, the opponent controls the player using the analogue sticks or the direction pad while the goalkeeper can be controlled using the left and right bumpers. Players kick, trap, and head the ball using the right analogue stick, while the analog stick is used to pass, shoot, and dribble the ball. If a player touches the ball, a realistic animation will show what the result of the contact is going to be, and whether or not the ball goes into play. Depending on how close the player is to the ball, the animation will show different results; a low pass is shown with a faint animation, while a high pass has a more detailed animation. Likewise, a header is shown with a closer animation, while a shot is shown with a more detailed one. If a player is in possession of the ball, the opposing players will react to the players that will try to win the ball back from them, thus showing different animations depending on the type of player and the distance from the ball. How can you play FIFA? FIFA is played by moving the player around the pitch using the analogue sticks or the direction pad. The player controls the player using the directional pad, the opponent controls the player using the analogue
